THE HUNT SABOTEURS ASSOCIATION HELPS THESE ANIMALS DIRECTLY

As foxhunts up and down the country prepare to undertake these sordid activities, there is only one possible chance these recently born creatures will have to survive. Hunt saboteurs act directly on the animals' behalf – using harmless tactics to intervene between hunters and quarry.

Quite often this means the blowing of hunting horns, to call hounds away from the covert. Alternatively, many groups use scent dullers to dose the ground, making scenting conditions difficult. Whatever tactics are employed, thousands of foxcubs are saved by our actions and with no risk to either hounds or hunters.

If you hate cruelty, you can do something positive to end it. By joining the Hunt Saboteurs association, your membership along with others, will help us to increase our activities, thus saving many more animals from this nightmare of terror and death. If you choose to be active in the field, we can put you in touch with your nearest group.

As Autumn approaches, many young cubs are about to become victims of this cruel and unnecessary sport – if you value their safety – please complete your membership today.

BORN INTO A WORLD OF TERROR

THE TRUTH BEHIND CUBHUNTING

SLAUGHTER AT DAWN.....

Cubhunting is the secret side of foxhunting – it is carried out in the heart of the countryside, sometimes as early as six in the morning and well away from the eyes of the public. This callous activity, carried out by all foxhunts, at the beginning of autumn is to introduce new "puppy" hounds to killing.

In a typical cubhunt, riders and foot followers are placed around the edge of a wood, or "covert", where the litters of young foxes dwell – their purpose is to form a human fence, thus trapping the unsuspecting cubs inside, before the hounds are entered.

Encouraged by the voice of the huntsman, the hounds proceed to scent out their quarry – and for the terrified foxcubs, the environment in which they have spent the last 4 or 5 months growing up, is suddenly transformed into a deathtrap.

With all earths and underground escape routes blocked by terrier men, the invasion of hounds forces the cubs to run in terror. For the hunted cub, the only means of escape is to flee from the wood – but its escape is denied by the shouts and lashing whips of the hunt followers around the perimeter.

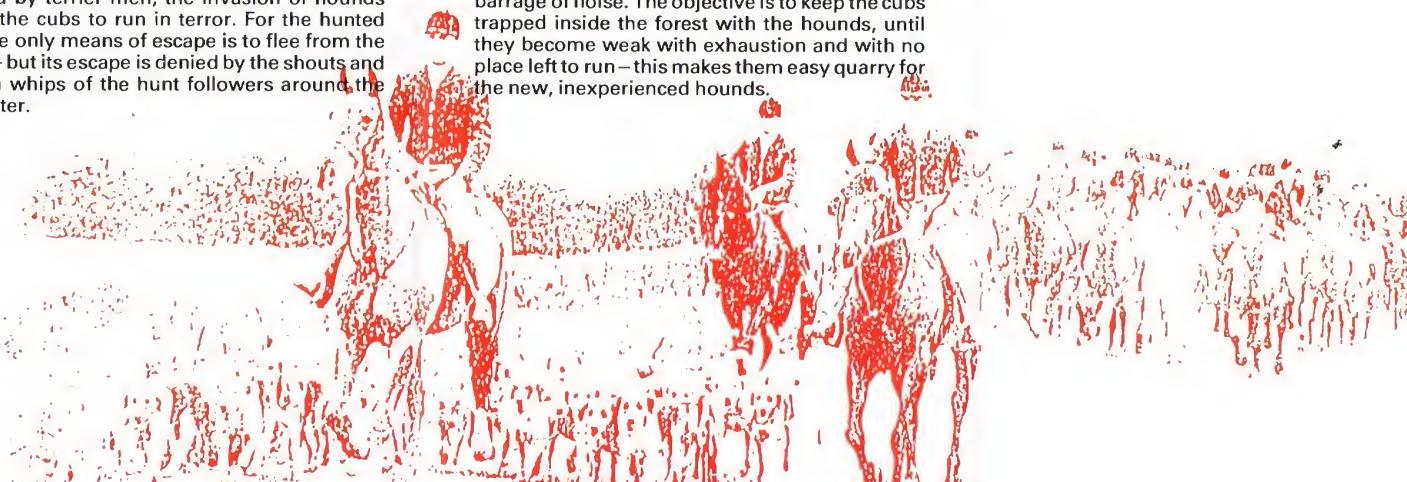

When the inevitable kill is about to take place, the older hounds are frequently held back, to give the puppies a chance to take part – these inexperienced hounds lack the enthusiasm of their elders, shy and hesitant as they are forced to approach the cornered cub which must now fight for its life. All too frequently the cub is mauled continuously for several seconds before death finally releases it from this cruel ordeal.

To the average, thinking person the whole concept of using foxcubs as pawns for training young foxhounds to kill, is ruthless and sadistic. Yet the hunting fraternity claim that it is a very necessary part of hunting. With the law in this country backing such activities, these defenceless creatures have no chance – except for one.....

The Hunt Saboteurs Association.

For the frightened cub there is no light at the end of the tunnel – if it even gets near the covert edge, it is abruptly frightened back by this constant barrage of noise. The objective is to keep the cubs trapped inside the forest with the hounds, until they become weak with exhaustion and with no place left to run – this makes them easy quarry for the new, inexperienced hounds.

BORN TO BE FREE...

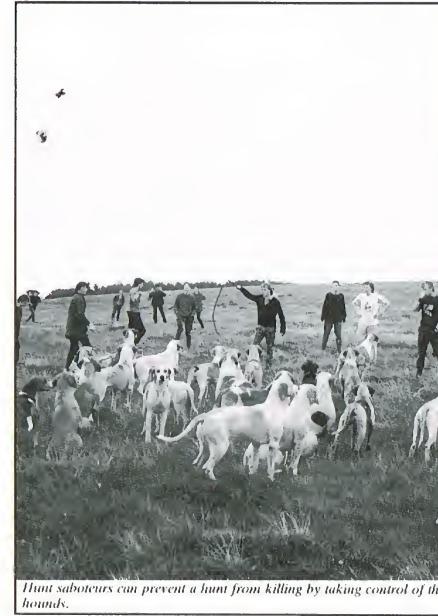

.....NOT HUNTED!
- HELP US TO FIGHT BLOODSPORTS -

THERE IS ONLY ONE ORGANISATION THAT WORKS DIRECTLY TO PROTECT WILDLIFE FROM SUFFERING AT THE HANDS OF HUNTSMEN.....

THE HUNT SABOTEURS ASSOCIATION

The Hunt Saboteurs Association started in the 1960's with a small but determined group of people, sick of the idea of wild animals being used as the tools of a highly distasteful sport. Since then, our organisation has grown and we now have groups, the length and breadth of Britain, attending fox and hare hunts every week.

Hunt saboteurs can prevent a hunt from killing by taking control of the hounds.

The ugly truth that lies behind fox hunting is well hidden from the public - there have been cases of hunts training young hounds, by digging live fox cubs from their earths and throwing them to the pack in order to let them taste the blood of their future victim. Some hunts have built artificial fox earths in areas where foxes are scarce, simply to encourage the existence of enough victims to satisfy their sadistic pleasure in the hunting season. And evidence has been captured on film, of the use of the "bagged" fox being released yards in front of a pack of hounds, to ensure a kill.

This nursing vixen was driven to ground by the hunt, prior to being dug out by terrier men and killed.

Such barbaric practices have been proved time and time again, but no government has as yet made the obvious move to ban them from this country - a country where 80% of its citizens believe they should be outlawed.

This means that the hunt have the right to carry on ruthlessly inflicting pain and death on thousands of wild animals as they have done for hundreds of years. This can no longer be tolerated.

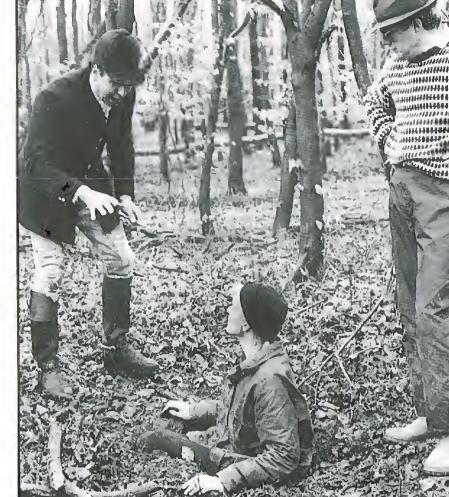

Our organisation aims to help wild animals directly at the very place where they are hounded and harassed for sport - in the hunting field itself! Every week groups of people attend hunts up and down the country, using simple tactics to intervene between the hunters and their quarry, helping hundreds of wild animals escape this horrific fate.

On returning to the vixen's earth, saboteurs rescued these nine newly born fox cubs, who without their mother would have also died. All nine were taken to an animal sanctuary.

Our methods prevent the pursuit and death of thousands of animals every year - and the tactics we use are completely harmless. The Hunt Saboteurs Association works against all sports involving the torture of wildlife - that includes the hunting of foxes, hares, deer, mink and otter, hare coursing, badger baiting, game shooting and angling.

In some cases, certain hunting organisations kill so rarely, they start to lose members and that is when they are on the road to closing down. With enough people behind our organisation, we can eventually put a halt to bloodsports forever. This is where we need more members - any one can take part in hunt sabotage and the association currently holds members across generations - from teenagers to senior citizens. Members also have the option of being active in the field or simply supportive of our work.

Another exhausted fox takes refuge underground. This time a hunt saboteur occupies the earth to prevent the hunt from digging it out.

We urge you to join us - The Hunt Saboteurs Association does more than campaign against bloodsports, it halts them in their tracks. Please help us to save even more lives.

Sometimes a fox succeeds in escaping from the hounds by taking refuge underground in a drain, or badger set, or in another fox's earth. It may then be dug out using terriers, a process which can take several hours. Sometimes on being pulled from the ground it is shot.

THE FOX AND CONSERVATION

When fox hunting began as an organised sport in the early 18th century, the English countryside looked quite different from the way it does now. Hunting people rode to hounds across open ground.

Then the land began to be enclosed by hedges and fences in the interests of agriculture, and the countryside became what it is today. So the hunt followers adapted to the land, and rode instead over fields and hedges.

Preservation of coverts, woodland and other uncultivated ground has only ever been an incidental contribution of the hunt to conservation. It has never been its purpose.

Sometimes hunt supporters suggest that as well as conserving the land they are helping to conserve foxes, too, a claim which contradicts their more frequent assertion that foxes are pests which need to be controlled.

THE FOX AND PUBLIC OPINION

In 1978, a National Opinion Poll showed that 60 per cent of the population were in favour of a law to ban fox hunting. By 1984, the figure had risen to 70 per cent, according to a Gallup Poll survey.

Public opinion can, therefore, change quickly, but the opinions of hunting people seem not to change at all. Their pleasure of 250 years in the pursuit and killing of a wild animal with dogs for sport continues, despite the opposition of nearly three quarters of the people of this country.

LET'S TAKE ACTION

If you are opposed to fox hunting, you can help the RSPCA to bring it to an end. Please write to your MP demanding a change in the law to abolish fox hunting NOW. Enclose this leaflet with your letter.

ACTING FOR ANIMALS BY

We Receive No State Aid

The RSPCA was founded in 1824 to promote kindness and prevent cruelty to animals. At that time abuse of animals was common.

Since then the RSPCA has achieved much in many areas of animal welfare, but our modern way of life poses its own problems for animals. Their well-being demands the vigilant concern and protection of the Society as much now as ever before.

Today the RSPCA works with equal commitment in four main areas – Companion Animals, Farm Animals, Animal Experimentation and Wild Animals – and because it receives no State aid, relies on the generosity and goodwill of caring people everywhere.

Foxes have been hunted for sport in Britain throughout the past 250 years. As people have become increasingly concerned about animal welfare over the past century, so hunt followers have given various reasons for their pursuit, besides the fact that they enjoy it.

Today, when pressed to justify their actions, most hunt supporters explain that killing foxes by hunting them with hounds is necessary to protect poultry and livestock, and makes a positive contribution to conservation. They say that the fox is a pest whose numbers have to be controlled.

Despite all the changes there have been in agriculture, in the environment and in our knowledge of fox biology, the hunt supporters' arguments have not altered.

Tate Gallery, London

The RSPCA rejects those arguments. We say that:

- Fox hunting is NOT necessary for the protection of livestock.
- Fox hunting is NOT necessary for conservation.
- As research has shown, the fox is NOT a significant pest.

But our main objection is that CONSIDERABLE SUFFERING is inflicted on foxes chased and killed by dogs for 'sport'.
AFTER 250 YEARS, IT IS TIME FOR FOX HUNTING TO STOP.

THE FOX AND FARM LIVESTOCK

This century has seen a marked change in attitudes to wildlife, and today a more enlightened and tolerant view is taken of many animals once widely regarded as pests. Though the fox has traditionally been thought of as one of them, research over the past 20 years has cast it in a different light.

For example, scientific studies in many parts of the country have shown that foxes kill very few lambs. They do, however, scavenge carcasses of stillborn lambs, or lambs which have died from various causes. It appears, therefore, that the fox is often mistakenly accused of killing lambs.

The fox is often blamed, too, for killing chickens. But today most birds are housed and so at little risk from foxes, while free-range poultry can be protected by suitable fencing.

As far as control of the fox population is concerned, there is growing evidence that, in family groups of foxes, only one dominant vixen gives birth, so reproduction is naturally suppressed. Non-selective control methods like hunting disrupt such social mechanisms.

Occasionally an individual fox may be a serious nuisance, and humane destruction of that animal may be necessary. But the RSPCA does not believe that hunting – by nature indiscriminate – is an appropriate method of dealing with a particular animal.

Nor do we believe that it is efficient or humane. If it were intended to be, Foxhounds would be bred for speed rather than stamina, to produce sprinting ability rather than the staying power required for a protracted chase.

FOX HUNTING

THE BLOODY TRUTH!

The Lanarkshire and Renfrewshire foxhunt meet twice a week for the purpose of providing thrills and social prestige for its participants at the expense of wild animals.

Clydeside Hunt Saboteurs in only ten years of existence have brought the local foxhunt to its knees. We have been responsible for the escape of countless foxes from the hounds and a demoralised dwindling group of Hunt Fanatics.

We need money to fund our activities; we have very low overheads and no paid staff so most of the money we receive goes directly into the struggle.

With your support we can continue to rescue wild animals. Our group depends not only on active 'sabs' but a wide range of supporting activities from fundraising, street stalls, public meetings publicity, letter writing etc. etc.

If you can help with any of these activities please don't hesitate to contact us.

WHAT YOU CAN DO TO HELP

Clydeside Hunt Saboteurs have been operative in Renfrewshire since 1981. The saboteurs engage in direct, but peaceful, action to save the lives of hunted animals in Renfrewshire - many people do not realise how much hunting goes on in the countryside around Glasgow and Paisley.

Hunt Saboteurs fight for wildlife in the very fields where it is threatened, harassed and mutilated by unimaginative human beings in the name of sport. Our objective is to make bloodsports unworkable, impractical and obsolete through a campaign of non-violent direct action. Our short term aim in our area is to save as many animals from the hunt as possible, whilst drawing people's attention to the sadistic practice of fox-hunting and, in the longer term, to hasten the day when bloodsports are abolished by law.

You can ensure that Clydeside Hunt Saboteurs goes from strength to strength until fox-hunting no longer exists in Renfrewshire. We are always urgently in need of funds. We have very low overheads and no paid staff so most of the money we receive goes directly into the struggle, mainly on the cost of transport to enable saboteurs to reach the hunt.

With your support we can continue to save wild animals. Our group depends not only on active 'sabs' but a wide range of supporting activities. If you are able to support the Clydeside Hunt Saboteurs financially, please make cheques or postal orders payable to the Clydeside Hunt Saboteurs Association or, preferably, fill in the form below and pay by standing order.

TERRIER WORK

“WE THE TERRIER MEN HUNT THE FOX
BECAUSE WE ENJOY IT, NOT BECAUSE THE FOX IS A PEST, A ROGUE, OR A KILLER OF STOCK”

B. Mills (Shooting News)

WHAT THEY DO

People with terriers are part of every foxhunt. They follow the hunt in landrovers hoping that a chased fox will take cover underground.

When this happens they cover all the holes where the fox can escape with nets and a terrier is sent down. Once found the fox has to fight for its life. Guided by the sound of the battle, the terrier men dig down to the fox and pull it out. Sometimes a baiter is used, that is, a terrier which does not attack the fox but just stands and barks at it until the fox is dug out. It is then killed, usually by being shot or with a blow to the head from a spade.

Sometimes foxes are bolted from the hole by a terrier, or put in a sack and released, both to provide further hunting. The fox has little chance of escape from either, as it is usually released or bolted just yards from the hounds.

It is not just the fox that suffers, many terriers are injured. The large amount injured is reflected by the fact that in the show ring, if part of a terrier's face is missing, it may be assumed by the judge to be perfect.

Digging for foxes does not just happen at foxhunts. Terrier men unable to control their lust for blood for the few months when there is no foxhunting, continue terrorising animals all year round.

BOXING DAY

THE GREAT COUNTRYSIDE
C O V E R U P

IT'S ALL A SHOW

As the festive season approaches, the hunting world is preparing itself to invade the countryside near you and kill wild animals for fun.

Boxing day will see fox, hare and stag hunts parading their hounds in an attempt to encourage more people to participate in bloodsports. The hunt will meet in a town square or market place where the supporters will be asked to make a donation to hunt funds and then toast the hunt and its activities. After this morbid ceremony, the hounds will be gathered together and the hunt will move off to begin the killing.

DON'T BE FOOLED

During this period, the bloody truth of hunting is veiled by the traditional picturesque scenes of horses and hounds. This great countryside cover-up hides the real facts about hunts and their activities.

Hunts all over the country, some near you, will be chasing animals to the point of exhaustion; unable to run any further, they will die in the jaws of the hounds. In the case of foxhunts, should the fox seek refuge in an earth, terriers will be used to corner it underground from where it will be dug up and killed. Hundreds of terrified wild animals will die a horrific and pointless death.

YOU CAN HELP STOP THIS

The Hunt Saboteurs Association has successfully campaigned against all forms of hunting for over a quarter of a century. Every week groups of concerned individuals, people like yourself, are out in the hunting fields giving our wildlife a chance of survival. By joining the HSA you too can play an active role in saving our country's wildlife for now and the future.

DON'T LET OUR WILDLIFE BE HOUNDED INTO EXTINCTION.

HARE COURSING

PUBLIC OPINION

Do you approve or disapprove of HARE
COURSING?

Disapprove: 80%
Approve: 4%

(NOP Market Research Ltd)

Organised hare coursing is followed by approximately 1,000 people in Britain today. The aim of this 'sport' is for two dogs (usually greyhounds) to compete against each other in pursuit of their victim.

HARES ARE DRIVEN over a distance of ½ mile or more into the coursing field by some 30 or so people called 'beaters'.

The two dogs, straining at the leash, are released by the 'slipper', who gives the hare a recommended start of about 80 yards (although sometimes it is less).

The already tired hare then has to run for its life. The mounted judge awards points to each dog according to its skill in turning the hare, which may or may not escape. The death is not a pretty sight. When both dogs catch the hare it can become a living 'rope' in a tug-of-war, being pulled and torn between two powerful dogs.

Supporters of coursing say that the hare is always killed instantly. Time and time again it is proved that this nothing more than a lie.

The hare's agony may last several minutes, depending on how quickly the handlers or 'pickers up' reach the dogs. At this point, the hare is more often than not still alive and screaming. It is then taken from the dogs and killed, usually by having its neck broken.

Live hare coursing takes place between September and March every year. The events are staged purely for entertainment. Betting has certainly helped to keep it alive for so long.

Coursing is not a form of pest control. The hare is becoming so rare that in more and more areas it is having to be introduced in order to provide 'sport'. Between 600 and 1,000 hares are killed through organised coursing annually.

BLOODSPORTS

LEGAL & ILLEGAL

DOG FIGHTING

Working up the dogs into a frenzy prior to the fight

THE CONNECTIONS

THE PEOPLE who take part in Bloodsports, especially fox-hunting, like to give the impression that they are nice, law abiding citizens.

THERE IS evidence to show that they are far from it.

'TERRIER MEN' are part of every fox hunt. They follow the hunt, hoping a chased fox will go into a hole. When this happens terrier dogs are sent down after it to try to get it to run again. If it does not run again the 'terrier men' dig down to the fox. When the fox is dug out it is either shot or thrown alive to the hounds or put in a sack and released for further hunting.

THE CONNECTIONS

Every convicted badger baiter or badger digger has been a foxhunting terrier man. Terrier men have also been involved in dogfighting and cockfighting. The kennel huntsman of the Wbeatland Foxhunt was convicted of cockfighting and fighting cocks had been kept in the hunt kennels. Also in the bloodsport paper 'Shooting Times' books about dogfighting, badger digging and cockfighting have been advertised.

Bloodsport fanatics will use many excuses to justify their reasons for murdering animals and will, of course, deny connections with illegal bloodsports but the evidence shows that there are links. There are no reasons for any of these sick pastimes to continue. If you know of any people involved in illegal bloodsports please contact us, the R.S.P.C.A. or the police.
